This is Earth, but no...

This is Earth, but not our Earth.

Somewhere on the far side of space and time, in a not so parallel dimension, is a timeline that would approximately match XXXXad on our calendar.

In this world, Julius Caesar was not killed by the senate. In this world, his old friend Brutus had a change of heart. He warned Caesar of the nasty deeds that were plotted against him.

Instead of dying that day, Caesar ruled that the entire senate were guilty of treason. He sentenced them all to be crucified along the roman highway, spaced from Rome to Gaul.

In this world, the South had won the Civil War. It wasn't a dominating victory, but with the death of Lincoln the Union had to restablish itself. So they offered a truce with South. It wasn't much, but it ended the war and established the Confederacy as a legitmate government.

The fighting didn't end there however. The Union and the Confederacy engaged a Naval war for control of the caribbean. The conflicts broke out sporadically between 1871 until 1901. It was a heated conflict that also got the British, the French, the Dutch, Portuguese, and the Spanish involved.
